

In the music industry, a record producer has many roles. Those roles include controlling the recording sessions, coaching and guiding the musicians, gathering the ideas of the project, directing the creativity, and supervising the recording, mixing and mastering processes.

Today, the recording industry have two kinds of producers: Executive Producer and Music Producer; they have different roles. While the executive producer has the financial role of the project, the music producer is responsible for the music of an album.

At Claycastle you may wish to use one of the in-house engineers/producers or alternatively chose to bring your own to the session. Either way we are committed to giving our clients what they want from their recording session.
